Mrs. Albert Tunstall nec Eubank, who is suing and being sued for a di-verce in the New York courts, was seen by a Dispatch reporter yesterday and asked about the article from the New York Sunday Mercury which was republished in these columns yesterds morning. She pronounced the article almost totally untrue, and gave the following as the correct version of the

THE LADY'S STORY.

I met Mr. Albert Tunstall at the house of Mrs. Isbell, in this city, in December, 1884. He stayed here several weeks; then went to the country to visit relatives. While he was away I corresponded with him. While in them. the country he proposed marriage to me through a letter. I did not answer positively then. On his return to Rich I did not answer here a few days : then went to New York. We continued the correspond ence until the first part of June, woon he came to Richmond again to marry

HOUSEKEEPING IN A PLAT.

Two weeks after we were married we went to housekeeping in a fiat on Forty-fifth street. But I forget to tell you when we were married it was an understood thing between my husband. his step-mother (Mrs. Peck), and myself that when Mrs. Peck came to Richmond, in Precember, I was to come with her, and it was understood further between my husband and me when I wa visit my mother anyhow in December. My mother couldn't come to see me for Mr. Tunstall said he hated her, and she should never enter his house.

A SEA-SICE WOMAN. Well, I left New York with Mrs. Peck on the steamer Wyanoke Decemher 8th, and reached Richmond on the night of the 10th. While we were at sen we crossed a disabled schooner.

Mrs. Peck and I were in the same stateroom, and both very sea-sick. She, out of currosity to see the schooner, got up and dressed herself and called to me to come. I was so sick I could not go. She then insisted on my getting up and looking out of the state-room window with a shawl thrown around me. While was looking out of the window Mr

As we passed Mr. Hunt. the assistant purser, who was sitting in the office writing, said, "Come in here for a minute," and as I started in he remarked, "I know a girl that has your picture." This started a conversation, and I stayed in his office some fifteen minutes, conversing upon general the balance of our trip she was very HOME AGAIN.

The boat arrived in Richmond about Il o'clock at night, and ma, accompanied by my cousin, Miss Florence Cottroll, and a boy, were down at the wharf to meet me. I then left Mrs. Peck, and went with them up to my aunt's house, Mrs. Cottrell, on Church Hill, where my mother had been stay ing for about two weeks. Mrs. Peck mained on the boat all night. Ever since I have been back in Richmond have been living with my mother.
